

ZACHARY KAUFMAN/The Columbian

Built in 1886, this Queen Anne-style house served as home to Brig. Gen. George C. Marshall and his wife, Katherine, from 1936 to 1938. The house is a museum open for tours and available for wedding and event rentals. Marshall went on to serve as secretary of state and received the Nobel Peace Prize for his plan to rebuild Europe after World War II. Details on all 21 houses on Officers Row can be found at www.columbian.com/vancouver-barracks.
